

5 finger gratitude

Recommended for grades:

K4 – 8th grade

Practice description:

Gratitude, or appreciation, is a thought or feeling of being thankful for someone or something. Paying attention to what we appreciate can take our mind off what is bothering us and lighten our mood. When we appreciate moments of happiness, warmth or joy in our day, we are also training our mind to be more positive, which can increase the natural frequency of these thoughts.

Transcript:

Welcome to the 5 finger gratitude exercise.

You will be asked to use your imagination to appreciate and be thankful for people and times in your life. It's important to stay with these thoughts and feelings for 20 to 30 seconds so you train your mind to notice all the good around you. There are no right or wrong things to appreciate.

Let's start by getting into a mindful position. Sit with a long, strong back and allow your hands to rest in your lap.

- Pause for 2 seconds

Try softening your eyes and turning your gaze down toward your knees or to the images on the screen. If you feel comfortable, you may choose to close your eyes.

When you are ready, think about someone in your everyday life that you appreciate. It could be a teacher, a grandparent, parent, or friend. It could even be a pet.

Imagine this person. Are there certain sounds or images that come to mind?

- Pause for 4 seconds

If you choose, think "I am so grateful for this person."

- Pause for 4 seconds

When you are ready, bring something "BIG" to mind that you appreciate or are thankful for. Big things might include your family, your strong body, or a warm home.

- Pause for 4 seconds

Try to notice the details that help you appreciate this big thing. Where are you?

- Pause for 2 seconds

Who are you with?

- Pause for 2 seconds

What is your expression?

- Pause for 4 seconds

You might choose to think to yourself, "This is something I really appreciate!"

- Pause for 10 seconds

When you are ready, bring to mind something "small" that you appreciate. Smaller things could be a sunny day, your favorite outfit, realizing someone did your chores, or a warm welcome from your dog.

- Pause for 4 seconds

Imagine this small thing. What is special or meaningful for you about this?

- Pause for 4 seconds

Try thinking, "I am thankful for this thing."

- Pause for 10 seconds

When you are ready, think of an "experience or time" you are grateful for. This could be a sports or musical event, a holiday, a trip, or something else.

- Pause for 4 seconds

Where are you? What are you doing? What makes it special?

- Pause for 4 seconds

You might think, "I am so grateful for this."

- Pause for 10 seconds

When you are ready, think of a group of people for which you are grateful. This could be your family, a team or club you are a part of, or some other group. If you prefer, you can always choose a person, time, or experience from before.

- Pause for 4 seconds

As you imagine a vivid image of this group, notice who you are with.

- Pause for 4 seconds

Notice how you feel in this group.

- Pause for 2 seconds

You might choose to think to yourself, "I am very grateful for this group of people!"

- Pause for 4 seconds

Take a moment to reflect on what you noticed and felt during this exercise. Know that you can transform any moment of your day by bringing up feelings of appreciation or gratitude by counting out 5 things you are grateful for on one hand.

When you are ready, open your eyes and bring your focus back to the room around you.
